6. I then spoke at length on the critical nature of the Philippines political situation and the need for the United States to be prepared to deal with any eventuality, i.e., Imelda taking over or short-term chaos before the political situation could stabilize.

7. Director then spoke of the situation in Angola and how Savimbi has the Cubans and the Angolans on the run yet our State Department policy seems to be selling Savimbi out.

11. I raised the question of the status of General Walters' freedom medal. Poindexter wondered whether they ought to go through with it now that Walters was going to the UN. I told him it would be a great calling card if the newly appointed U.S. ambassador to the UN had just received a freedom medal--that it would receive great worldwide press. Poindexter said he would raise it with McFarlane.
